had been prepared and presented to him by the Rev. Timothy Richard of Tal-yuen Fu, who is ever awake to the multitudinous interests of his parishioners. By this it is seen that the highest point of the Pass is at Yao-lo-shan 123 miles west of Huai-lu. At this place the wagen road mounts to 4,400 feet above the level of Huai-lu, which is 500 to 800 feet shows the sea. West: ward the Pass declines to Shih-tich and 26 miles further is Tai-you Fu, which stands 2,600 feet above the level of Huai-ln. The distance between Huai-la and T'ai-yuan fu is only 150 to 160 miles—the former is upon the margin of a fertile and populous plain 120 miles S.W. of Pac-ting Fu and water communication. The latter is at the head of the greatest plain of Shansi and in easy communication with the iron and coal mines which have made that plain the garden and the storehouse of the province.

The greatest impediment to a railroad would probably be found in the losss mountains, which extend from Ping-ting Chon westward to Shihi Trieh, a distance of 60 miles. A peculiarity of the loss formation is that the soil will not hold water as other soils do; so the water sinks to the bottom, and, finding rook or clay, makes its way forward to an opening of the losss. This process together with other peculiarities carries it away in perpendicular " clearatures " and leaves deep ravines or canyons as they would be called in Californis, with high walls standing erect along their sides. Sometimes the traveller on the high land. making around the head of one of these conyons, may drop a lump of dirt (there are no stones to drop) from his outstratchod hand and see it fall bottom. This tenderby to make peculiar figures tableland with numberless deep ravines, all with perpendicular walls and almost never shewing a rounded knoll. It appears that Tuilier, which seems to be his real name, has been travelling on a Swiss passnortand that he secured pecuniary aid in Shanghai on the representation that he was the secretary of a newspaper reporter, who had left him de-stitute. M. Masse, by skilful questioning, learned that he had been a waiter in Lyons; that his passport was not gonuine, but obtained by unfair means, and that he is a fugitive from justice. Herein is the cause of his attempted assassination. Tuilior was at once arrested, and will doubtless be dealt with as his crimes deserve.
